After the Hare implored as many as possible to turn up after her previous "taxicab" efforts there was a sizable pack and in beautiful sunshine we posed and then received the first of many speeches by the Hare

Several minutes later and the Hare pointed the way

We ran past the station and the Hare's car

With the Hare handing out hornet swats and spray

Megan has her first hash Flash (that did not take long!)

Running through some leafy lanes and over fields

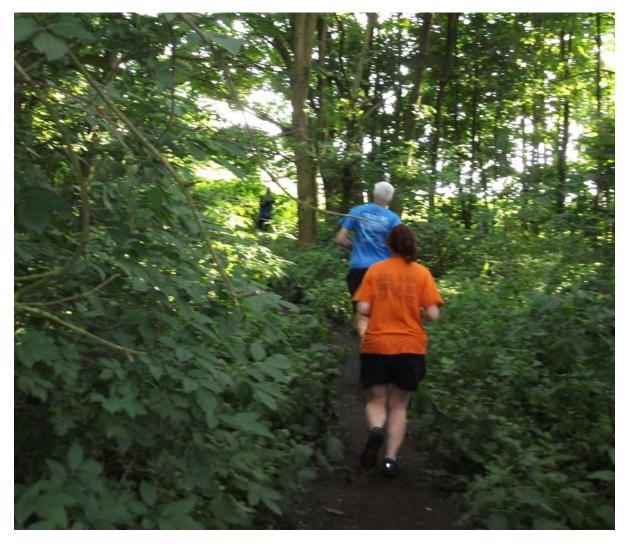

We arrived at a railway bridge and thought about things for a while whilst we test loaded the bridge

Some more leafy paths

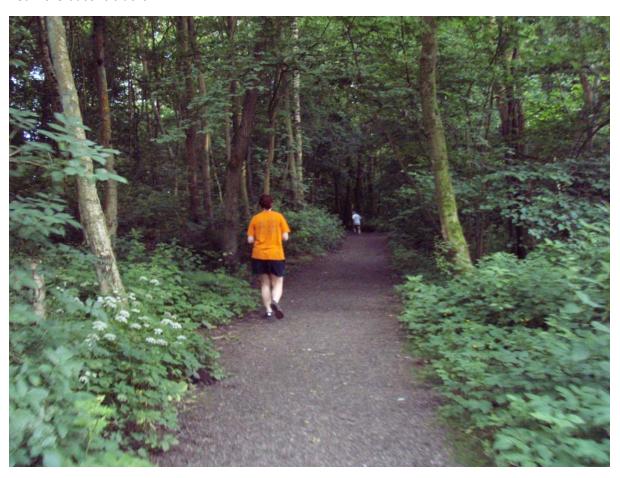

The Hare gave another of her speeches (this one seemed to be mainly about the impact of dogging on the local community but she may have been referring to this advert (unless it was cottaging that we was referring to.

Yet more bucolic tracks

Where the Hare disappeared into the bushes and recovered her stash of liquid.

Moving on things got somewhat confused with the pack breaking up with various ideas on the

Luckily some of the pack kept their heads and following the trail up to a road

At the road the trail turned left for a short distance and we then ran back parallel to the previous bit of trail meeting the remainder of the Pack shepherded by the Hare

Through the field to a

Another speech by the Hare and we ran along a divider between fields

Arriving at the other end of the track we were greeted with what looked like driftwood which was extremely difficult to walk on let alone run on.

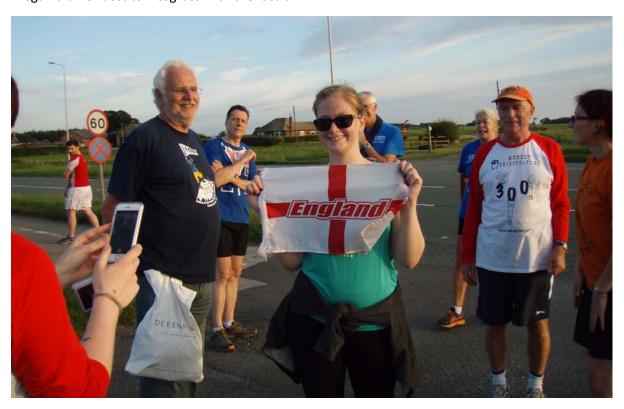

The Hare announced a short cut up to the road

Megan did her best to integrate with the locals

The trail led through another field and we arrived back in the village to and

On Inn and back to the pub before returning to the Hare's car for the circle.

Down Downs were awarded to:

The Hare for the audible trail

Carthief for staying in the carpark (instead of walking to the circle)

Megan: Virgin

For not shortcutting: Carthief, Under the Table, Cleopatra, Rebecca, Megan.

Returnees: Rebecca, Now and Then

The Down Downs were largely drunk in some rather red liquid which tasted the same as it looked. Megan liked it!
